Author of the Month

Dhruv Bhatt (ધ્રુવ ભટ્ટ) is a prominent Gujarati novelist, poet, and essayist known for his unique contribution to modern Gujarati literature. He was born on 8 May 1947 in Ningala village, Bhavnagar district, Gujarat. His full name is Dhruv Prabodhray Bhatt. He completed his schooling in Jafrabad and Keshod. After pursuing commerce studies for two years, he left formal education and started working as a Sales Supervisor at Gujarat Machine Manufacturers. Later, he opted for voluntary retirement and dedicated his life completely to literature.

Dhruv Bhatt's writings are widely appreciated for their deep philosophical insight, environmental awareness, and portrayal of human emotions. His works often highlight rural life, tribal communities, spirituality, and the relationship between humans and nature. He has a distinctive storytelling style that blends realism with philosophical reflection.

Some of his most notable novels include Samudrantike, Tattvamasi, Akoopar, Agnikanya, Lovely Pan House, and Karnalok. His novel Tattvamasi received the prestigious Sahitya Akademi Award in 2002 and was later adapted into the Gujarati film Reva. His novel Akoopar also gained immense popularity for depicting the life of Maldhari communities in Gir forest.

Through his remarkable literary works, Dhruv Bhatt has earned a respected place in Gujarati literature and continues to inspire readers across generations.
